Joseph Grant, Induna School

Joseph is the Hospitality teacher at Induna School which is located inside Acmena Juvenile Justice Centre, South Grafton. Joe is a really dedicated teacher who goes out of his way for these underprivileged boys. He is part of the Transition team which facilitates education or employment for our boys on their release from custody. Joe has established links with employers through his industry connections which has led to incarcerated boys having access to genuine outside work experience opportunities and even some boys being offered work in local restaurants.

Joe's classes cater for events held within the school including staff lunches and big occasions such as NAIDOC week. This helps connect our students with the wider community and guests such as local Aboriginal elders, whilst providing engaging hands-on education. Joe does all this in a professional and enthusiastic yet modest manner. Joseph is a worthy recipient of recognition on World Teachers' Day.
