Stephen Mason, Southern Cross University

Stephen has been a lecturer/tutor at Southern Cross University since 2000 for the Bachelor of Business degree. He has taught/managed twenty separate mostly quantitative subjects during this period, assisting students, often without quantitative backgrounds, to understand the world of quantitative thought. Whilst not always the most desirable of areas of study for students, he has approached the teaching of these subjects with thought, effort, enthusiasm and above all humour. Many students have deliberately chosen subjects through their whole degree with Stephen, from 1st year to graduation. Student feedback received attests to Stephen's efforts and care for his students. Stephen is a worthy recipient of recognition on World Teachers' Day.
