Fellow of the Australian College of Educators

FACE

The Australian College of Educators advances the education profession nationally across all sectors and levels for the individual and collective success of Australia's educators. Established in 1959, the Australian College of Educators' key objectives are to:

- provide a strong national voice for the profession;
- promote professional standards of a high order;
- recognise excellence in professional practice;
- foster the professional learning of educators; and
 - enhance the status of the profession.

Fellowship of the Australian College of Educators is one of the highest forms of professional recognition that the College can bestow. Fellowships are awarded to those educators who have made an exemplary contribution over and above the expectations of any paid professional role in the field of education. Fellows of the Australian College of Educators (FACE) are recognised by the wider education community, as making a significant contribution to the education profession through excellence in professional practice.

To be awarded a Fellowship, applicants must clearly demonstrate outstanding professional performance and achievements when judged against the specified criteria, and more generally, their peers.

Those who are granted Fellowship are entitled to use the post-nominal FACE (provided that they are a financial member of the College); as are those non-members granted the status of Honorary Fellow. (Honorary Fellowship is awarded by nomination and invitation from the College only; self-nomination is not permitted)

Fellowship Eligibility

Current financial ACE members [MACE] are eligible to nominate themselves for Fellowship in accordance with the stated criteria and processes.

The National Board and State and Territory Membership and Awards Committees are also eligible to initiate applications for Fellowship in conjunction with those being nominated.

Non-ACE members wishing to join the College can elect to nominate themselves for assessment for Fellowship in accordance with the stated criteria and processes outlined.

The National Board and State and Territory Membership and Awards Committees are also eligible to initiate nominations for Honorary Fellowship. Honorary Fellowship is a confidential process whereby those who have made an outstanding contribution to the advancement of education in Australia, and possibly internationally, and are not an ACE member, may be recognised for this achievement.

Notes:

1. Those seeking to join ACE as Associate members or those already holding this category of membership [AAACE] are ineligible to apply for ACE Fellowship.
2. Honorary Fellowship is not open for self-nomination. Honorary Fellowships are rarely awarded and would not normally exceed one–two awards in any year.

Planning and Writing an ACE Fellowship Application

Preparation

Being awarded a Fellowship of the Australian College of Educators is recognition of your personal contribution to the education profession. To be a Fellow, you will need to provide evidence of:

- A history of distinguished service;
- Significant and lasting contributions to the profession;
- Recognition by the broader profession including other training, education or employer groups;
- Respect of professional peers;
- General acknowledgement of having attained a position of significance in making a positive contribution to education in Australia.

Before commencing your application ensure you:

- Have a clear understanding of the criteria and associated statements that need to be answered;
- Are able to provide clear, concise and convincing evidence supporting the benefits and impacts of your achievements;
- Have discussed your application with your referees and peers to gain feedback and support.

Completing the Application

The following provides assistance on the structure and style of successful applications.

Structure

Write a commentary on the evidence of each criterion that includes a description, analysis and reflection of your achievement.

- The description explains the context and nature of the achievement and the evidence to be presented.
- The analysis points to the evidence you have provided and discusses how and to what extent it illustrates that the criterion has been met.
- Your commentary on each criterion will conclude with a reflection on the achievement/s you have featured, its/their significance, and what you have learned for future practice.
- Provide evidence through referencing or other verifiable data. Add online links or web addresses to publications, reports or presentations if relevant.

Style

- Write in an active voice and ensure the structure of the information presented is easy for the assessor (who may not be acquainted with you, or your profile) to follow.
- Make each sentence succinct, avoid padding. This will not be all you can say, rather what you need to effectively make the claim.
- Avoid the use of dot points and duplication of information, merely cross reference if necessary.
- Start with a short summary sentence of the achievement claim and its basis. For more detailed responses, follow with the 'what was done and why', the 'how it was done (approach/tools/methods)' and the 'outcome/impact/response'.
- Write about WHAT you have ACHIEVED; this is not just a description of your aims and vocation.

Review

- Allow plenty of time for reading, editing and checking grammar and spelling.
- Seek feedback on the draft from a colleague, ACE State Committee Member or one of your referees.

Examples of Successful Fellowship Application Responses

The following examples have been de-identified for the purposes of providing a guide as to the ways in which successful applicants have responded to the Fellowship Application questions.

Example: Criteria 1: Evidence of outstanding professional and ethical practice over time

Criterion 1a Improving student learning and practice

Statement (i) Leading and/or collaborating in the development and implementation of effective, innovative curricula and evaluation strategies in the workplace.

In 2014, I initiated and implemented a whole school framework to assist teachers to evaluate, design and redesign learning activities that explicitly support students to develop their 21st Century skills. The aim of this initiative is to provide all teachers at the College with a common language and approach to 21st Century teaching and learning. I organised the professional learning course to be undertaken in a blended learning environment, which included face to face meetings and online collaboration.

I used the AITSL's Learning Design Anatomy report to guide the initiative, in order to design innovative and effective professional learning that was school-based and focused on improving student outcomes and teacher practice. I commenced the initiative by coordinating the training of six teacher leaders to undertake a two-day intensive course on the 21st Century Learning.

I created an online portal to guide all teachers through a structured, yet flexible approach for exploring the framework. The online portal provided teachers with a professional learning community in which to undertake an introduction to the 21CLD, and as an ongoing learning space to share classroom practice, gain new information and participate in professional conversations. I facilitated the 21CLD focus group to act as peer mentors so that they could model best practice, assist with the provision of resource materials, and actively engage in advocating the framework across the College.

I introduced the 21st Century Learning Design to all teachers at a whole school staff meeting and provided an overview of the expectations for completing the online modules over the school term. This was completed in teachers' own time in lieu of attending a compulsory PD twilight session. In each module, teachers were required to answer 'aspire' questions so that they could reflect on their current teaching practice and to provide critical reflections and ideas on how they could explicitly develop the 21st Century skills in their teaching and learning programs. Teachers shared their responses via a dedicated online forum. The online discussions enabled all teachers to share classroom practice across the College, which strengthened partnerships across the sub schools. It allowed for more time to process thoughts, ideas and critical reflections that would not have been possible in traditional face to face staff meetings. I organised staff to attend two follow up face to face sessions with the 21CLD mentors to discuss key themes in the online discussions, and to apply their knowledge of the framework to see how deeply a 21st Century skill was embedded in a learning activity. This approach capitalised on teachers already having a basic understanding of the 21CLD, and therefore the College could devote more time during staff meetings for integrating, applying and consolidating their knowledge and understanding. Using a flipped learning approach to deliver the 21CLD, all teachers were able to learn in their own time and at their own pace. Under a traditional model, teachers would normally review these materials after school or during allocated professional development time within the school day. Using this model, all staff at the College engaged in professional learning that was focused on improving student outcomes, embedded in teacher practice, was collaborative and reflective, and was ongoing and supported within the school's culture.

This innovative project acted as pilot study to reconceptualise professional development in the 21st Century and has since been shared and published in media resources. Furthermore, I was invited to present the model as a keynote speaker at EduTECH and ACER's Excellence in Professional Practice conference.

Example: Criteria 1: Evidence of outstanding professional and ethical practice over time
Criterion 1b Advancing educational scholarship, research or policy/product development

Statement (i) Sustaining high level educational scholarship and on-going professional learning and dissemination through grants, publications and presentations

I am consistently one of the top performers in research publications within the School of Education and Professional Studies, which is in the Top 50 such schools in the world. In the 5 years since 2011 I have published 1 book with another currently 'in press', 4 book chapters, 16 refereed journal articles and 5 papers in refereed conference proceedings. I am Editor in Chief of ' Education' and a member of the Editorial Boards of 4 international journals.

In the same 5 year period I have earned competitive research funding of more than 1.2 million dollars, including funding from the Australian Research Council.

I have presented at a variety of conferences including (specify), but I particularly value my regular presentations to teachers at the conferences of the xx Teachers Association of Queensland. I also regularly choose to publish my research in 'Teaching XX', the journal of the Australian XX Teachers' Association, in order to more directly inform practice.

I have been invited to present a keynote session at the conference of the Victorian Council of Deans of Education, and have been twice interviewed on ABC radio.

These achievements in research funding and publications have occurred despite the fact that for the past 18 months I have been in a leadership role in the School which means the proportion of my wWork devoted to research has been reduced from 40% to 25%.

Example: Criteria 2: Outstanding contribution to the profession above and beyond current and recent positions and formal duties.

Section (a) Effective leadership, management and/or involvement with external organisations to achieve stakeholder, program or project working group objectives.

From my first days as a member of the teaching profession, I sought active participation in professional bodies and organizations, to offer service and contribution, but also to learn. As a classroom practitioner learning the craft of teaching to Australian children, I became an examiner and reviewer for the Victorian Board of Studies, the VCE Network Chair for the xx Language Teachers Association of Victoria and the founding Vice-President of the national xx Language Teachers Association. Through these connections and engagements, I offered leadership, mentorship, and collegial support to fellow xx language educators, many of whom were recent arrivals from overseas. At that time, Victoria boasted the largest number of xx language students in Australia. Since moving into executive management of schools, both in Australia and internationally, I have taken up the challenge of contributing to leadership in international education.

Prior to the establishment of the Council of Internationally Accredited Schools of Australia (CIASA), Australian schools were not perceived by accrediting authorities as 'international' and were therefore unable to seek international accreditation. I was elected to the Board of Directors of CIASA to represent Australian Independent Schools in 2007 and remained on the Board until CIASA was subsumed into the Council of International Schools (CIS) in 2009, at which point I was appointed to serve as the Australian representative on the Board of Trustees for CIS. The key achievement of CIASA was that it demonstrated the viability of the international accreditation concept for Australian state and independent schools (Wilcox, A. 2009. The Emergence of Internationally-Minded National Schools in Australia. International Schools Journal; Nov 2009, Vol. 29 Issue 1, p.38). Currently, there are 49 CIS accredited schools in Australia, both state and independent, among 716 worldwide.

In 2014, I was elected to serve on the International Baccalaureate Asia Pacific Regional Council; I was re-elected in 2015 for a further three-year term. On the Regional Council, I am one of six school heads to advise the Asia Pacific Regional Director on matters of policy and practice for the 685 IB schools in the region (<http://www.ibo.org/about-the-ib/the-ib-by-region/ibasia-pacific/regional-council/>). At the request of the Director General of the IB, I have worked to establish a national association for IB World Schools in the Asian region. I established the corporate entity for the Association in Hong Kong in 2014, drafted and registered the Articles of Association, and was elected as the founding Chairman of the Board of Directors. I signed an agreement with the IB in 2014 recognizing the Association (<http://www.ibo.org/about-the-ib/the-ib-by-region/ib-asiapacific/associations-of-ib-world-schools/>).

While other regional bodies such as ACAMIS and EARCOS serve as a support network for international schools that are largely educating expatriate students, this Association has been intentionally established to engage with and support local private and national schools that are excluded from the existing bodies serving international schools. As a member of both the IB Regional Council and the Chairman of the Association, my role is one of engagement with member schools and leadership, advocacy on behalf of member schools, and the dissemination of accurate and timely information about policies and practices in the IB world. The introduction of eAssessment in IB schools, initially in MYP, but to be followed in DP courses, poses a significant threat to language teaching and learning practices in IB schools. I have been the chief advocate of 'pause and review' in negotiating with IB senior leadership on adapting assessment to suit the specific challenges and issues associated with other languages.

In recent years, I have forged partnerships with the Needham Research Institute (NRI) at the University of Cambridge and the University of Hong Kong, both are aimed at collaborating on research projects of relevance to these institutions. NRI was originally founded to continue the work of Dr. Joseph Needham on the 'Science and Civilization of China' project. Now entering the final phase of publication, NRI is working with ISF to establish a new research mission on the science and technology of the East.

In 2015, The University of Hong Kong, in conjunction with the National University of Taiwan and The ISF Academy commenced a collaborative project to research and enhance approaches to language learning, particularly for second language learners. This collaboration has its most visible and public expression in the annual International School Chinese Language Education Conference. For the first time, I co-hosted the most recent tri-partite conference in a school (<http://cacler.edu.hku.hk/events/thethird-international-school-chinese-language-education-conference-andworkshop/>). The establishment of an ISF Research Centre was also announced at this time; the Centre will work with external institutions on language acquisition research; Hong Kong University is a founding partner.

Example: Criteria 2: Outstanding contribution to the profession above and beyond current and recent positions and formal duties.

Section (b) Held a central and effective role in forming and disseminating information, opinions and discussion that raises awareness of key education issues, adds value to policy development and improves the standing of the profession and the educator.

I am a member of the Australian College of Educators (ACE) Policy Committee, working on developing position papers and other policy information and helping to keep the membership of the College aware of policy development. That committee is actively seeking to develop approaches to enhancing the standing of teaching and teachers, and resisting attempts to deprofessionalise teaching or impugn the quality of teachers and teacher education. While this is a relatively recent role for me, I have been an engaged and active participant and will continue to grow into the role.

As a means of further raising awareness of key issues, adding value to policy development and improving the standing of the profession, I am in the process of developing a podcast entitled 'TeachingTeachers', which will focus on teacher education in Australia. I have registered the domain name and created a Facebook group for the podcast, acquired the software and hardware and am learning the required technology. My collaborators are from a variety of Queensland universities. The podcast will be available on Stitcher and iTunes, and will address issues in teacher education and education more broadly in Australia, for a national and international audience.

My role as one of only 13 members of the Board of the Australian Council of Deans of Education (ACDE) means that I am involved in policy development and engagement at the highest level, including meetings with Minister Birmingham. The ACDE is a peak body representing teacher education and the profession of educator more broadly in Australia, and I am proud to actively serve as one member working to forward its goals, which in many ways parallel those of the ACE.
